Ozena is the professional or technical name given to an advanced form of catarrh in which ulceration has eaten through the membrane lining of the nose to the cartillage of the bone. Any case of catarrh may end in exens, but it most frequently occurs in those who are naturally scrofulous. The discharge takes place through the nostrils or through the throat, and is generally of a yellowish or greenish-yellow color, frequently tinged with blood, and almost always attended by an offensive smell. In the language of Dr. Wood, of Philadelphia, "the disease is one of the most obdurate and disagreeable which the physician has to encounter. In tad cases the breath of the patient becomes so revolting as to isolate thim from society, and render him an object of dis. ut even to himself."

In some instance pieces of bone become separated and slough off, leaving deep, unhealthy allers, which secrete a blood matter, and are extremely difficult to heal.

After ozens has continued some time the sense of smell becomes impaired and often lost.

Deafness is one of its most common consequences and results from its extension through the custachian tube to the internal ear.

The greatest danger, however, because the most common, is that it will extend downward and affect the lungs. In most cases of pulmonary disease catarrh is present in some degree, and in many instances it causes a large share of the patient's discomfort.

Besides these grave consequences, all of which are liable to spring from scrotlalous catarrh or exema, there are others which, if less dangerous, are sufficiently unpleasant. It
